

The International Songwriters' Association has always been a great fan of the Bandit Newsletter. Finding out which A&R people are in the market for new songs or acts, across all commercial genres, is key to getting your publishing deal. In a world where TipSheets come and go, UK-based Bandit has stood the test of time, and is essential reading for those trying to make the breakthrough into the music business.

Bandit A&R newsletter has been published continuously, every month, for 24 years, starting out as a purely paper based publication delivered by post and then adding an email delivered option in 1997. The newsletter is now exclusively distributed as a PDF document delivered direct to your email box on the first working day of each month.

Bandit's mission is to provide you with a continuous, reliable and accurate stream of information about all kinds of people and companies in the music business world-wide that are ready to consider investing in new projects, artists and material across all commercial genres. The important thing to understand is that the content of each issue is generated during the previous month by talking directly with the people named and getting their agreement for their needs to be published.

Over the last 24 years, Bandit has developed relationships with companies which regularly communicate their opportunities through Bandit's A&R Newsletter. In addition to this, Bandit is always discovering brand new companies and people springing up and needing great talent to make an impression.

Bandit is not for the wannabe who expects a lucky break to make it all happen for them. Bandit is only of use to people who realise that the music business IS a business, which requires effort, persistence, investment and knowledge, as well as innate talent, to find a market for their "product".

You only have a short window of opportunity to become successful, so you need to get things moving, grasp all opportunities and make things happen, before its too late!
